CARMEL VALLEY, CALIF.

OCTOBER 19, 1972

BOOTS, UMBRELLAS AND RAINCOATS reappeared this past week after a long, long absence, creating something of a jam for girls scrambling to get onto the Tularcitos school bus at the foot of Rancho Road. Although the rain was falling steadily at this point, the hooded miss at left dutifully clutched her bathing suit and towel under her arm. And swimming classes were held, too. For more on the weather scene, see page 10. (photo by George T.C. Smith)

TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir:

We speak as recent residents not only of Carmel Valley but also of the lovely state of California. We are from New Jersey where it is now too late to turn back the forces of exploitation and greed. Remember, please, that New Jersey once was nationally known as the Garden State. It was green and lush with many acres of farmland, dairyland and horse farming land. Its towns and villages were neatly laid out, unintrusive, adequate.

Then, New York City's population boiled over and northern New Jersey fell into the clutches of developers, industrialists, realtors, and political hacks, all out to make some quick money at the expense of residents already there and, more importantly, the total environment. New Jersey became a commuter's paradise. Ugly developments sprang up overnight. Roads clawed through verdant open acres, schools became inadequate as did municipal service, the once-clean Atlantic became polluted, as did every river and stream in the mid-to-Northern part of the State.

Please do not think this is an exaggeration, because, unfortunately, it is not. There is not one clean creek or stream or rivulet in mid-to-Northern New Jersey. Her big rivers, like the once-lovely Passaic, are brown and sluggish, sick unto death from industrial and residential wastes. Annually, the seashore towns (along the Atlantic) empty their sewerage-holding tanks into the Atlantic. That once-beautiful ocean now further pollutes New Jersey's already litter-filled beaches with the brown residue of improperly treated sewerage. It is no longer safe to eat shellfish from the Navesink and Shrewsbury Rivers, those twin waterways which once provided ample seafood for New York and New Jersey. It's too late for the "Garden State" but Carmel Valley still has time.

The symptoms of the cancer of decay and exploitation have manifested themselves in two places thus far: Sage Road by the Airport and Village Road near Bernadelli Square. We can isolate the infection by refusing to permit any further construction of multiple dwellings in the Village area (or anywhere else from Mid-Valley to beyond the Village). It also is unnecessary to keep the commercial zoning throughout the surrounding areas of the village proper. Within the village, there are many vacant stores and shops and offices in buildings already constructed. Why do we need more?

Youth complains there is nothing for them to do, yet the Community Center, properly managed, would constitute an ideal spot for the Valley's young people to gather in a wholesome atmosphere. The Center also could provide an excellent meeting place for other groups, i.e. Golden Agers, service clubs, and, hopefully, a mayor and council one day. Perhaps the people who run the Community Center need some community support.

To make Via Contenta and Village Road alternate routes to divert traffic from Carmel Valley Road would be an unspeakable mistake and would destroy the Village completely. The Tularcitos Elementary School sits at the end of Via Contenta as it intersects Ford Road. To turn this relatively quiet intersection into a major artery shows little regard for the children and teachers attending Tularcitos School, the residents of Via Contenta and the future of the entire village.

The Airport has come under heavy criticism. We believe that this criticism is levelled at the Airport by people who have vested interests in that property if the Airport is put out of business. The rear of our house backs up to the Airport and in the half year we have lived here, we are unable to fault either the traffic load at the Airport or its operation. It is NOT noisy, and anyone who has any knowledge of aircraft operation must realize that the chance of a mishap is slight indeed. The chances are far greater for a major mishap at the Tularcitos School if Via Contenta is made a major artery than at the Airport. Rumors of the Airport's accommodation of jet planes is ridiculous on its face.

The alternative we have to the Airport is relatively high density residential and/or condominium development. This would be a major disaster to the Valley, to the Village, and to those of us who love the rural setting that now exists.

We have heard numerous complaints about the heavy summer traffic along Carmel Valley Road. It seems to be a matter of semantics and relativity. When one compares what we have witnessed as "heavy traffic" in New Jersey, and what is termed "heavy" by some villagers here, the comparison fails. At best (or worst) it is a steadily moving trickle which accentuates and diminishes depending upon the hour, day and season.

There is no need whatsoever to either widen Carmel Valley Road or by-pass it. It is more than adequate for the residents of the area and visitors. If the traffic doesn't flow rapidly enough for the few who want to abuse the road in their sports cars, then they are free to go elsewhere. The Carmel Valley Road is not a speedway or a freeway and it must never become one.

This letter is perhaps lengthy and yet it is all too brief in its sincere and urgent plea to protect Carmel Valley from irrevocable damage. We have a clear choice: keep the Valley as it is...rural, lovely, green, clean and quiet; or, the alternative, let it become an over-populated, under-served, defoliated, de-nuded, commercially infested suburbia filled with ticky-tacky houses and ugly (see Carmel Lago) condominiums. God help us if we let such a disaster occur.

Very truly yours,
GRACE DONAHUE

Dear Editor:

It was amazing to see the interest taken in the future of our Village. Many fine suggestions were made.

I am going to ask some "Why's."
Why was there no mention of the lovely little garden planted by the late Mr. Harvey Deal, in the Patio of Veralyn's Cafe?

Why would anyone complain about the dainty original, little signs of the same Cafe when the Village House sign across the street has a 6-foot sign across the front of the store, and another one somewhat smaller in front of the Hardware department?

Why was the cafe painted to conform to the other buildings across the street, if it was not to improve the area?

Why was the new owner of the new upholstery shop, refused to bring his roofline to the top of the side walls? That I can answer. It was the building code.

Why did they refuse the one story apartments behind the P.O. for retired people, with a large green belt around it and then turn right around and give permission for a group of two story apartments in the walnut grove?

Also why fight other businesses that want to locate here? We need more services of all kinds except restaurants, service stations, and should I mention real estate offices! Why not concentrate on some entertainment place for all ages. A movie house would help. Do people driving through the Village in a hurry really stop to shop and look around?

How do you gauge the height of a building? Is it a certain number of feet from the ground or in comparison with other buildings in the same location? How many have noted the new paint job on the Firehouse!

"To The Eyes Of The Beholder!" Thank God that we have eyes that can see the beauty of the mountains around us!

Respectfully,
VERA STOKES

Dear Editor:

The Carmel Valley Village Master Plan Study Group wants to express our gratitude for your complete coverage of our present project. We want to thank you for publishing our questionnaire in the October 5th issue of the Outlook and for the answers contained in the October 12th issue. We appreciated the thoroughness of the people who answered and the many very good suggestions contained in the letters. It will be a great help to us.

We would appreciate any other suggestions that Carmel Valley residents may still want to express. They can be sent to me at Route 2, Box 745, Carmel, California, 93921.

Sincerely,
WILLIAM B. BROWN

THE TOWN CRIER

Are you interested in doing volunteer work that is challenging, rewarding, and where you learn a new field of helpful human endeavor even as you are teaching others?

If the answer is "yes," and if you have three hours to give one day a week, then you will be interested in the work at Children's House, a Language pre-school, in Carmel Valley.

Children's House, one important phase of the entire program of the Behavioral Sciences Institute in Monterey, is located at Pilot Road and Via Contenta. Classes are in two sessions—8:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 11:30 to 2:30 p.m. five days a week. Volunteers are needed for both sessions.

If you are interested in participating in this work with young children, please contact Mrs. Ivan Ross at 624-0639 for further information.

The Salinas-Monterey Area Transportation Study is now conducting roadside interviews on major roads in the Salinas area, selected roads between Monterey and Salinas and on Highway 1 on Carmel Hill. Interviewing will be conducted on weekdays only and last through November 2, weather permitting.

Traffic will be delayed briefly while motorists are asked about their trip origin and destination. Each location will be interviewed for a day.

The purpose of the roadside interviews is to determine present travel patterns so that future transportation needs may be accurately forecast.

Back to School Night, an annual Open House for parents, will be held on Thursday, Oct. 26 starting at 7:30 p.m. at Carmel High School. All parents are invited to see the various staff members with whom their child will be working, to hear what the instruction plans to cover during the year, and what grading and study expectations the staff have. Students will be asked to fill out a program card and bring it home. Parents should bring that card on Back to School Night and go to the first period class at 7:30.

Mr. and Mrs. Aloys Nicholson of Carmel Valley, Coordinator of Driver Improvement Programs for Monterey County Division of the California Retired Teachers Association, has announced a new defensive driving course to be conducted on Nov. 6, 10, 13 and 17 at the Monterey Public Library, Pacific & Madison Streets, Monterey.

Sponsored in cooperation with the National Safety Council, the course will consist of four class sessions beginning at 10 a.m. each day. Certificates will be awarded to participants who complete all eight hours of the course.

Instructors certified by the Council will use films and other visual aids to demonstrate ways older drivers can improve driving skills to avoid accidents and unnecessary property damage. Aloys and Novella Nicholson are the instructors.

Registration information for the course can be obtained from Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson, 8-B Scarlett Road, Carmel Valley, telephone: 659-2172.

Flood plain zoning for Valley to be considered by supervisors

By PAT GRIFFITH

FLOOD PLAIN ZONING for Carmel Valley is a live possibility once again.

The Board of Supervisors voted Tuesday to hold a public hearing to discuss possible flood plain zoning for the Valley on Nov. 28 at 2 p.m. In calling for the hearing, supervisors emphasized that it was with the "clear understanding" that flood plain zoning in the Valley would not enable residents to participate in the National Flood Insurance Program unless a new county-wide ordinance is enacted.

The supervisors' action was prompted by a letter from the board of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association requesting immediate enactment of an interim flood plain zoning ordinance which would qualify the county for participation in the National Flood Insurance Program.

Supervisor Willard Branson urged his fellow board members to call a hearing on such a county-wide ordinance, but he was only able to get the support of Fourth District Supervisor Loren Smith.

Supervisors Warren Church and Arthur Atteridge voted against Branson's motion, and Supervisor Ellis Tavernetti was absent on a trip.

When the county-wide effort failed, Atteridge said he would be willing to second a motion calling a hearing for Carmel Valley alone.

Branson then made the motion for the more limited application of flood plain zoning, which carried.

After hearing arguments on Nov. 28, the supervisors will decide whether or not there is sufficient public interest to pursue the matter further. If supervisors feel there is support in the Valley for this type of zoning, the matter will be referred to the Planning Commission for further study and debate.

FOR THE FIRST TIME on Tuesday, some supervisors drew the clear distinction between applying the county's existing flood plain zoning ordinance to a specific area, such as Carmel Valley, and the much broader and more complex issue of participating in the National Flood Insurance Program.

A Flood Plain Ordinance, specifying types of development allowed in three categories—Flood Plain 1, 2 and 3—is already part of the county's zoning law.

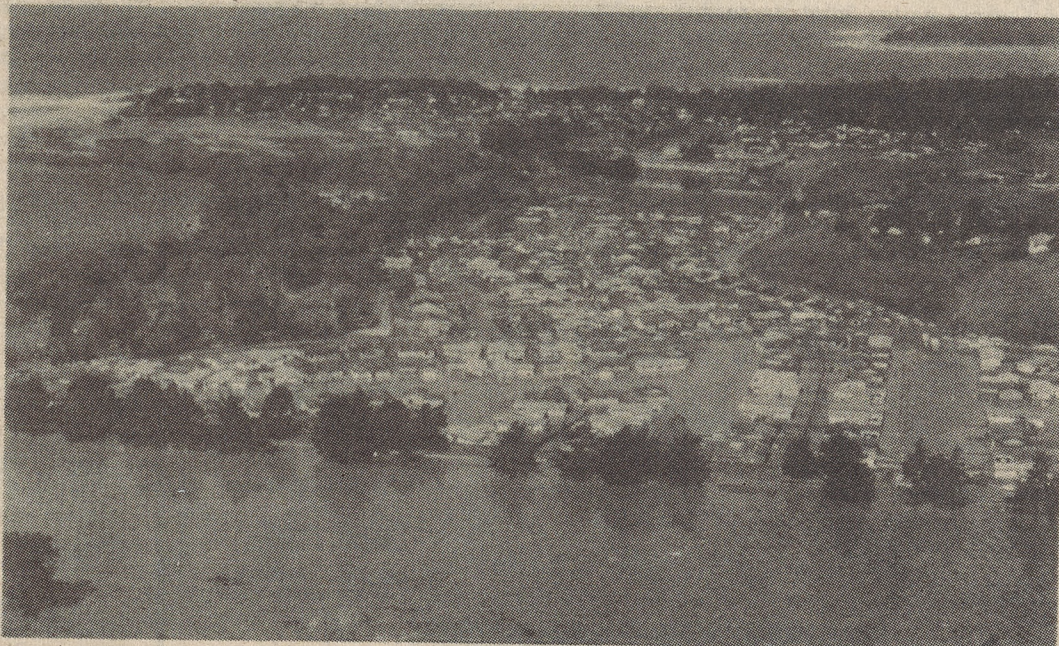

This is available to be applied to any area that requests it, and, in fact, has been applied to the Pajaro River area and to a few lots of the Rancho del Monte Subdivision No. 14 on Garzas Road.

Participation in the National Flood Insurance Program, however, involves something more.

Under terms of the legislation establishing the insurance program, all the flood-prone areas in the unincorporated sections of Monterey County would have to be covered by flood plain zoning before any resident could apply for insurance for his home or business.

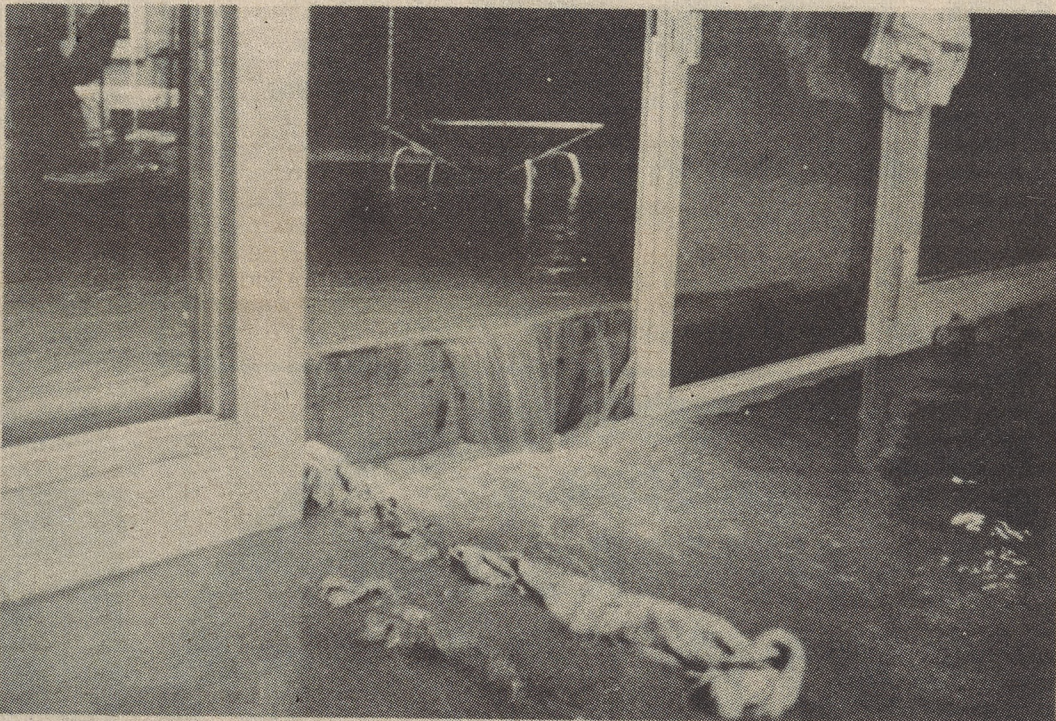

Whenever this has come up in the past, supervisors have refused to consider mandatory flood-plain zoning because of a fear it would lower property values and place a burden on owners of undeveloped land.

In their latest letter on the subject, CVPOA directors noted a recent news story that President Nixon plans to ask Congress to expand the national insurance program to

THIS WAS THE VIEW of Mission Fields during the flood of April, 1958, looking west, with the Odello fields in the foreground. The Corps of Engineers says that a flood of this magnitude is likely to occur once in 20 years. According to the Corps' study of encourage broader participation. Coupled with this would be a cut-off of all federally-backed mortgages or construction loans to areas which had not signed up for the program by July 1, 1975.

SUPERVISORS COMMENTED Tuesday that even if they were willing to consider a county-wide ordinance, which two of them weren't, it would not be because of this potential legislation because there is no way of knowing now if it will be enacted.

During the course of Tuesday's discussion, it was pointed out that if Monterey County had already qualified for participation in the national insurance program, homeowners and businessmen in the Big Sur area could have been covered for mud slide damage.

Supervisors did take two steps to help the beleaguered Big Sur area.

First, they voted to ask Governor Reagan to declare the entire county a disaster area, so that Big Sur could be eligible for state and federal aid.

Secondly, they voted to review all grading permits issued in the Big Sur area from the Little Sur River to five miles below Rocky Creek for their "environmental impact."

This motion was made by Branson, who said he had recently driven around the Big Sur area in his jeep and had seen unnecessary duplication of roads leading to private homes.

"These roads had nothing to do with the mudslides," Branson said later. "But these permits do need to be carefully watched."

Meanwhile, back in Carmel Valley, raindrops kept falling. Not exactly a flood's worth, but enough to put puddles in the riverbed and hope in the hearts of those who are seeking flood plain zoning.

More students needed for MPC classes in Valley

According to an extensive survey conducted by Monterey Peninsula College several months ago, there are lots of Carmel Valley residents who would like to take college-level courses if they were offered close by.

So where are all these potential students now?

That's what MPC officials are wondering, after initial classes in American history and the psychology of human behavior failed to draw anywhere near a full class size group to the White Oaks Theater this week.

And unless more students show up, the classes will be called off at the end of next week.

American history is being offered from 1 to 4 p.m. on Monday and Wednesday. Psychology of Human Behavior is scheduled for Tuesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. to noon.

Both classes will run for eight weeks, and both are college transfer courses, which means credits can be transferred in the future to the University of California or any of the State colleges.

MPC is willing to set up child-care services during class hours if there is a need, but mothers must first go to class and register and say they would like to have a babysitting arrangement available.

"According to our survey, these were the subjects that had the most interest, and there were many who replied," said an MPC spokesman. "So we've started this as an experiment. We hope it will be successful."

But unless at least 15 people enroll in each course, the MPC-at-the-White-Oaks campus will close up shop this month.

NO DOUBT ABOUT IT, there was a CELEBRATION at the Seaside home of former Valley-ites, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Avila recently! The party was planned for a variety of reasons including the wedding anniversary of Leona and Lori, his birthday, welcoming as sponsors for their daughter, Lisa, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lobato, and the fifth birthday of the Lobato's son, Eric. Mexican music for dancing, Mexican food, tamales and enchilladas, accompanied the 100 pounds of steak, 50 ears of corn, etc., and Mexican decor which turned the garage into a cantina where libations were served -- all made it a memorable evening for the 130 guests from Carmel Valley, San Jose and San Francisco.

Among those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Dan Lucero, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Tom Kumere and Gidget, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Turjillo, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Hernandez, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Sampson, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Illikoff, Mrs. Phyllis Burns and children, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Feliciano, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Lucero, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Harry Darlin, Dan Tavares, Mr. and Mrs. Sal Rubio, and Manual Alvarado.

THE RAIN didn't dampen the warm wishes in the least of old friends and new who dropped by the General Store last Saturday to congratulate June and Ken Van Hagen on the anniversary of their TENTH year in business - a party which officially opened the new western wear department under the handsome sign made by Carey Crockett. Vickie Van Hagen, Zoe Roberts and Jane Korver helped to serve punch, cake, and coffee, to the well wishers and scurried around with flashlights and candles after the storm caused power failure. The birthday gift certificates were awarded as door prizes to Freddi Nichols ($25); Mrs. O.C. Klump ($15); and Jon Storm ($10).

'How to Use Native
Plants in your Garden' Tuesday

Horticulturist Charles Kline will be the guest speaker at the meeting of the Monterey Bay Chapter of the California Native Plant Society Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Room 24, Carmel High School.

Slides will illustrate Kline's discussion of "Use of Native Plants in the Garden." A graduate of Cal-Poly in ornamental horticulture, Kline is a former assistant manager of the botanical gardens at the University of California at Berkeley and has operated a nursery in Carmel Valley. He is, at present, teaching horticulture through the University of California extension services.

The public is welcome to attend the meeting.

FEW DISPUTE the fact that "swimmers are a hardy lot" but the thirty nine Carmel Barracudas entered in Sunnyvale Blue Sea AAU "B" meet last weekend passed the supreme test by traveling to and from (both Saturday and Sunday) and competing in near cloud burst conditions. There were nineteen teams entered in competition at the Sunnyvale High School Pool. Christine Bottaro was high point winner for the Barracudas placing in all of the five girls 15-17 events in which she entered... 200 I.M., 4th place, 5th place in 100 Fly, 200 Free and 100 Back, and a 6th in 100 Free. Also placing for ribbons were:

Pam Gayman, 6th, 100 Breast 10-U.

Dori Draper, 5th, 50 Free, 8-U.

Sara Hicks, 1st, 50 Fly, 8-U.

Lisa Conklin, 3rd, 50 Breast, 11-12.

Ken Conklin, 3rd, 100 Fly; 5th, 100 Back; 1st, 50 Free, 13-14.

Byron Kolding, 1st, 100 Fly; 5th, 200 Breast; 2nd, 100 Back; 4th, 100 Free, 15-17.

Highlight of the week-end for a number of the Barracudas was attending the Welcome Home Olympic Competitors of Santa Clara County ceremonies held at De Anza College. Several of the local swimmers now possess coveted autographs of Olympic swimmers: Keena Rothhammer, Jenny Bartz, Jennifer Riley, Brian Job and Mitch Ivy; Track Stars, Francie La Rue and Marilyn King; and a member of the soccer team, Jim Zilker.

SPOOK HOUSE NEARING COMPLETION

Bats, Vampires, and a Banshee or two will all be in place when the Community Center SPOOK HOUSE opens for fright tours on Oct. 28 from 6:30 - 8:30 p.m. The finest tarantulas and black widows to be found have been imported for the occasion by chairman of the Halloween event, Mrs. Vic Harber.

In addition to the haunted house tour, there will be lots of good things to eat at the Community Center Booth featuring pop corn, pastries, pepsi, and candy apples. The Barracuda Swim and Diving Team will have Halloween hamburgers, coffee, and cider. While waiting for their turn to tour the Spook House, children may try their hand at the Girl Scout Bean Bag toss, the 4-H Balloon Throw, or the Barracuda Fish Pond.

Bring the family and plan to make your Halloween an early treat at the Community Center Spook House.

SMATS to interview motorists on Carmel Hill

The Salinas-Monterey Area Transportation Study (SMATS) will be conducting roadside interviews on major roads in the Salinas area, selected roads between Monterey and Salinas and on Highway 1 on Carmel Hill beginning Monday.

Interviewing will be conducted on weekdays only and last through Nov. 2, weather permitting.

Traffic will be delayed briefly while motorists are asked about their trip origin and destination. Each location will be interviewed for a day.

The purpose of the roadside interviews is to determine present travel patterns, so that future transportation needs may be accurately forecast, a SMATS release said.

Fuess honorary chairman of UN Day

John C. Feuss of Carmel will be honorary chairman of a United Nations Day community celebration scheduled for Monterey Peninsula College on Tuesday.

Fuess, a former U.S. foreign service officer, will speak in the college Amphitheater at 4 p.m. to start the observance. Included on the program will be the national dances from around the world, as well as music and drama with an international flavor.

A specialist in international trade and labor relations, Feuss served on nearly every continent in the world during his career. His talk will point out areas of common concern between the UN and the Monterey Peninsula.

During the evening, at 7:15 p.m., a film entitled Games of Peace will be shown in the College Center adjacent to the Amphitheatre. Ethnic food tasting will be featured in one of the lounges in the center prior to the start of the film.

Numerous displays and exhibits by local organizations will be a part of the celebration.

Everything but fleas...

Valleyites indulge their rummaging passion

"THE FIRST ANNUAL Flea Market was TERRIFIC," according to Mrs. Vic Harber who chairmanned the event for the Community Center Board. "We plan to make it an annual affair - hopefully without the rain and wish to thank everyone who gave us assistance." Which proves once again that with the number of dedicated Flea Market followers in the area, a

"fail-proof" benefit is indeed a good old fashioned rummage sale! Seekers of rare, semi-precious, and JUNK watch the ads, signs, and bulletin boards each week-end for clues which will lead them to a bargain. There was something for everyone as shown in our pictorial coverage of last Sunday's "Greatest Flea Market the Valley Has Ever Known!"

TENNIS BALLS--for a nearby court or a swift juggling performance--Bob Newman skillfully tests the merchandise!

ABOUT TO BECOME a "succulent gardener" is David Stainbrook, who receives some gardening tips from Shirley Halle.

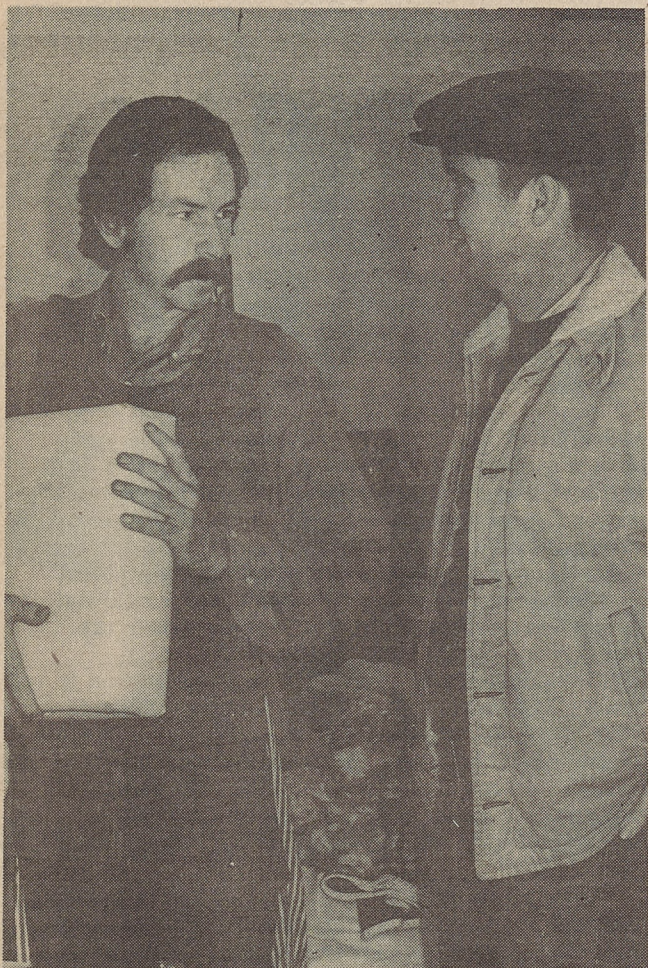

"AVAST THERE, me Hearties," was the cry of Steven Radowicz, who undoubtedly had just spotted a pirate ship sailing through the puddles of the Tularcitos playground!

"WHAT'S A NICE GIRL like you doing stuck in a thing like that?" seemed to be the obvious question to ask Susie Verde, a captive in a plastic head-lock.

"THAT HAT, it's ME," cries Nancy Rushmer--a beach bonnet decision which obviously met with the approval of (left to right) Terry Rushmer, Tracy Rushmer and Julie Zoellin.

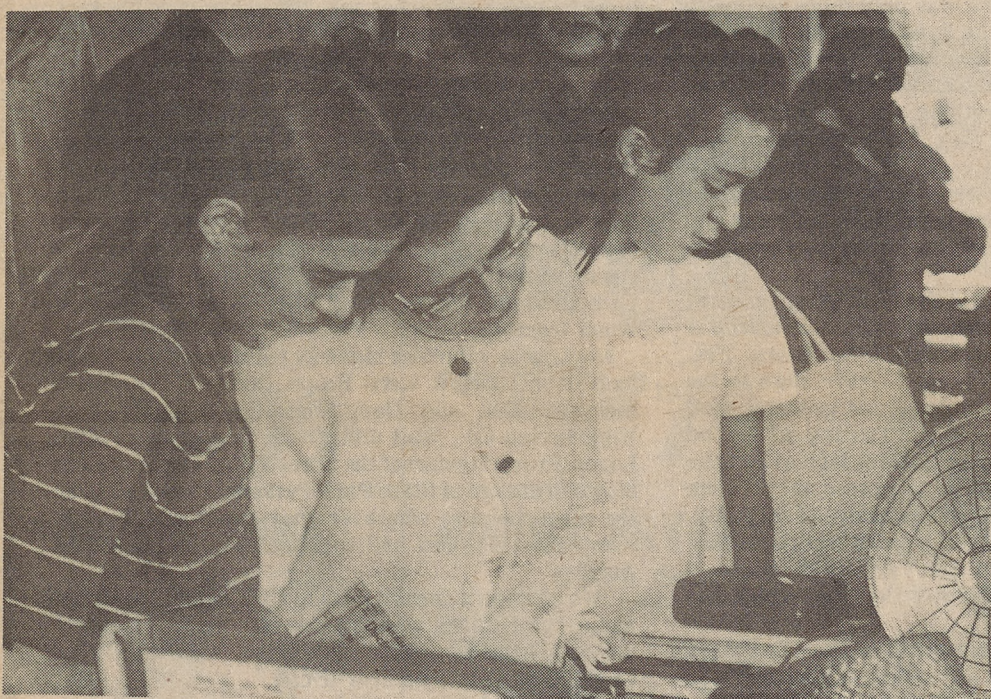

BARTERING for bargains is nearly as much a part of the game as the initial discovery—as one can tell from this sales pitch from Tom Valpey to Ilbert Tucker.

"THESE BOOTS were made for walkin' " was the decision of Jenny Foster who happily abandoned rain-soaked tennis shoes for high-fashioned footwear at the Sunday rummage sale sponsored by Our Lady of Mount Carmel Catholic Church Altar Society—a part of the first annual Flea Market sponsored by the Community Center.

TRACY RUSHMER believes in "getting to the bottom of things" as she inspects a box filled with treasures.

SUE McFADDEN (center) with daughters, Denice (left) and Stacy (right) were engrossed in the titles found in the book department—a busy booth with everyone searching for material to while away the rainy weekend.

BAUBLES, BANGLES and beads...just the thing for milady's gown when playing "dress up" envisions Rachel Hefling, browsing through the boxes of jewelry.

Photos by George T.C. Smith

THE UNSUNG HEROES of any successful rummage sale are the cashiers who are able to expedite—in the briefest possible time—an endless line of shoppers. Two of Sunday's workers, Jean Cummings, (left) and Doris Anderson (center) package the purchases of Mrs. Leo Berta (right).

"JUST WHAT I've been looking for," exclaims Sally Hapgood, while Don Berta's reaction seems to be, "Aw, shucks, she found it first!"

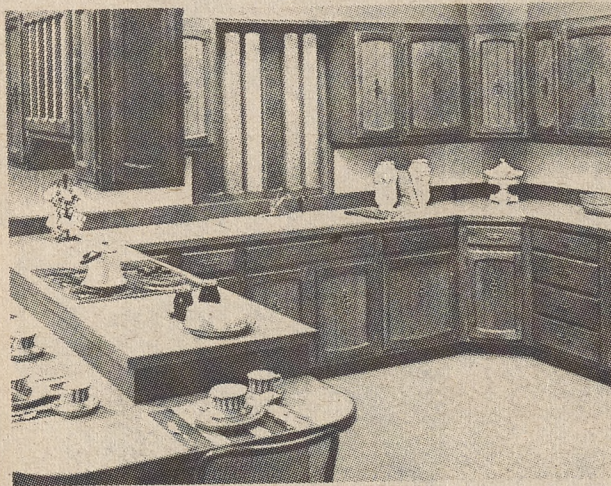

INTRIGUED with a mysterious "thing-a-ma-bob" was Valerie Farrington (it turned out to be an electric can opener!)

Neighbor helping neighbor dig out of Big Sur mud

By JEAN SNOW

In a neighbor-helping-neighbor endeavor, victims of the recent mud slides in the Big Sur Area are being dug out by residents who surround them. "We found my antique clock had stopped at sometime after 5 a.m. and figured that the worst must have hit us about that time," Mrs. Tom E. Murphy related as she stood in mud up to her ankles.

As she watched her hard-working neighbors Carol Berry, Fern Trotter, Dottie Williams, Marge Johnson and Mary Fleenor hose down her furniture, Connie Murphy smiled, "I am truly grateful for this help."

While the bright warm sun was shining down on the surrounding area of oozing, murky mud it was difficult to visualize the terror that had taken place during the predawn hours of Saturday, Oct. 14. The Murphy's garage and adjoining apartment had filled with the ugly, gooey mess so fast that they barely had time to get out, she in her night clothes and her son, grandson and husband in pants and shoes.

Charles Mohn, Big Sur resident and American Red Cross disaster coordinator for the area, discussed the problems of restoring the Village Store with owner, Richard Hartford. Hartford was only more fortunate than the Murphy's in that he lived above his store and his apartment had escaped much of the mud damage. Will Lussier, Robert Schwarz, Hilton Riley and Paul Hetich were doing everything from shoveling to driving small tractors as they scooped out the mud-filled interior of the store.

Phyllis and Don Smythe were a little luckier as their home didn't fill with mud but they heard the noise and felt the horror of a quivering home as the slime slithered around them.

Further down Route 1, Dick Nielson, general manager for the Ventana Ranger Station was asleep in the compact cottage he rented from Mary Fee. Pleasantly situated in a Redwood Grove close to the Juan Higuera Creek, Dick enjoyed his peaceful spot, until "I awakened to the sound of roaring water and what appeared to be at least a ten-foot high avalanche of water and mud approaching. As I raced out the back of the house and up the hill, I was aware of the noisy, frightening sound of tumbling rocks and boulders. However, I was fortunate it didn't go into the house, it passed by and only covered my Porsche, which has now been dug out."

Doris and Mary Fee, co-owners of the Glen Oaks Motel, described their first awareness of the trouble on Thursday morning when the felt as though an earthquake was shaking their rooms. "Later, we realized all the water pipes were gone and our foot bridge over the Juan Higuera creek was washed out. I still can't forget the roaring of the water, mud and thumping boulders and trees," Doris shuddered.

Mary added, "It is so horrifying to see the loss of that beautiful grove when viewing those layers of mud and debris and smelling that odor of wet on burned logs."

CONNIE AND TOM MURPHY had just arrived in the Big Sur area in August, from Torrance, California. "We had given up everything we had to invest in the business and home here. The other morning, after the slides I took one look at what had been our home and belongings with the mud over everything, the walls pushed in and said to myself, 'The heck with it, we'll just leave it!'"

"Then, all the kind neighbors started arriving with offers to help. I was healthy, my son was o.k., my grandson, Zack wasn't injured, so while I was really financially wiped out, we could work it out. The owner of the Big Sur Lodge, Don Tosh has given rooms to my family and the Smythes, and not the old cabins but the brand new ones."

"The American Red Cross has supplied us with new clothing and with family food accounts and fed all these helpers sandwiches and coffee. For over 20 years that garage had been there, with no problems, so we'll try again."

Mr. Mohn explained further that it seemed as though most of the Big Sur families were pitching in to help in whatever capacity possible. Reginald Dewar, a Realtor, Buzz Brown, sculptor and artist, and Howard Berry, a retired US Navy Chief were taking turns carting out wheelbarrows of mud from Murphy's living room, while Berley Farber, operator of the Big Sur Campgrounds was scooping mud with the aid of a small tractor.

Working as volunteer highway maintenance crew for four days straight were Ralph Dengate, Jim Somerville, Don and Gary McQueen of the Torre Engineering Co., Walt and Frank Trotter and Julian Lopez. Frank Stewart of the Forestry Service and Jack Stowe in charge of State Park Personnel were all over the place helping wherever they could and the US Army from Ft. Ord had supplied men and tanks of water.

"We all hope it doesn't start to slide again," said Mr. Mohn, but if it does, we know that once again it will be a neighbor-helping-neighbor situation, with the Red Cross giving aid wherever it can.

"A group of Carmel High school boys have volunteered their aid to work this next weekend wherever we put them."

528 acres may be annexed to Service Area 43

A PUBLIC HEARING on a proposal to annex almost 528 acres in lower Carmel Valley to County Service Area No. 43 will be held by the Local Agency Formation Commission on Monday, Oct. 30.

The hearing will start at 8 p.m. in the Board of Supervisors' chambers in the County Courthouse in Salinas.

The land under discussion for annexation extends from Val Verde Drive on the West to the boundary line for County Service Area No. 59 just east of Del Mesa Carmel on the east. It includes property extending 500 feet back from either side of Carmel Valley Road between the two points, except for sections which area already part of CSA No. 43.

Land in the proposed annexation area has an assessed value of $143,222, with improvements valued at $207,100. Population in the new area is estimated at 23 people.

According to St. E.P. Tyner, chairman of the CSA No. 43 committee, the purpose of the annexation is twofold:

- (1) To provide improved fire protection to present and prospective residents of the Val Verde Drive area, and
- (2) To fill in the "holes" in the service area's coverage between Highway 1 and CSA No. 59.

In addition to homes now existing along Val Verde Drive, the annexation would include buildings on Rancho Canada Golf Club, Carmel Middle School, the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula, and land surrounding the developed area of Del Mesa Carmel.

Descanso Oaks, a 30-lot subdivision extending from Via Mallorca to the San Carlos Ranch Road, was approved by LAFCO for annexation to CSA No. 43 in September, 1971, and therefore is not included in the latest application.

The Riverwood development on the extension of Rio Road has already been annexed to CSA No. 43, and annexation is mandatory as a condition of the use permit for the pending 45-unit Casas de Carmel on Val Verde Drive.

According to Tyner, CSA No. 43 presently encompasses an area valued in excess of $30 million. It is rated a Class 7 by the Pacific Fire Rating Bureau, and has a current tax rate of 88 cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

The service area is completing plans for a new fire station at the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, and has a new 1250 gallon pumper truck on order.

Tyner said that when the new station is operating, CSA No. 43 will provide an eight-man, two truck response to every fire within its boundaries. The second engine, shared with CSA No. 42 (Pebble Beach) will come from its base at the State Division of Forestry fire station on Carmel Hill.

Dry season finally ends . . .

A week of showers in

Carmel Valley

It's been a long, long time--a good six months at least--but rain finally fell on Carmel Valley last week.

It coursed down parched hillsides, puddled roads and parking lots and even dampened the sun-bleached rocks in the riverbed.

Since last Thursday, the Valley has recorded 1.87 inches of rain. Added to the drops which fell the previous week, it boosted the season's rainfall to 2.07 inches. Last year at this time we had only .31 inches of rain, a poor start on an even poorer winter.

Along with the first real rain came the first power outages. Saturday afternoon the Valley's PG&E substation was struck by lightning, which blew a transformer and shut off electricity for several hours. Service was intermittent from about 1:30 to 9 p.m.

A second bolt of lightning struck a PG&E transformer on a telephone pole atop Country Club Drive at 4:08 p.m. Saturday, causing still more problems for repair crews.

The mid and lower Valley was affected by the failure of a major regulator at the Del Monte substation early Wednesday morning. The 60,000 volt regulator failed at 1:32 a.m., and power was not restored until 2:58 p.m.

Monday afternoon's downpour added to the problems of two drivers, along Carmel Valley Road. A Safeway truck driven by Donald A. Tindall of San Rafael skidded off the road near Valley Greens Drive when it was attempting to brake behind a car turning left into the Valley Hills Shopping Center. No one was injured.

Later in the afternoon, Roger Williams of 8073 Lake Place, Carmel, lost control of his car on Carmel Valley Road near Miramonte. Williams was not injured, and refused aid from the Carmel Valley Fire Department.

IT WAS A GREAT WEEK for puddle jumpers. Leslie Robinson and Ann Parker show Olympic form as they broad jump a small pond in the parking lot of the Mid-Valley Shopping Center.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW...Carmel Valley Fire Chief Chip Collins actually found water in his rain gauge every time he checked it this week. The Valley's official weather station recorded 1.87 inches of rain since Thursday a week ago--not exactly a deluge, but enough to put the seasonal total of 2.07 inches way ahead of last year's meager .31 inches for the same date.

CRAIG SINCLAIR, son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Sinclair of Robles del Rio, was recently inducted into the Order of Gownsmen at the University of the South in Sewanee, Tenn.

CHANCE ENCOUNTERS...

ONCE IN A WHILE, we are stopped in our tracks by a confrontation between a small child and a dog. The dog may be minding his own business, either properly accompanied by his owner and on leash, or may be about his personal, unsupervised "doggy business." Often, the dog is about to pass the child without pause when the child cries out and clutches at his mother for protection. Mother is often guilty of making a noticeable, dramatic detour away from the oncoming dog.

Most children—and most people—like animals. Children are especially drawn to big, furry dogs, and sometimes it seems they have a built-in immunity to harm. We've known of instances where a very little toddler has approached and hugged a large dog, while the dog's owner froze, horrified in his tracks, fearing the worst. But the dog stood calmly, tail wagging gently, while the tot squeezed and patted until removed. Big dogs are generally very gentle and very tolerant of small children's advances.

Fear of dogs (like fear of just about everything) is learned, and it is most often learned from parents. The fearful parent usually has a very valid reason for his phobia—a childhood dog bite, perhaps—that has left him (or her) with a senseless fear and distrust of every dog he meets.

Wise parents, realizing that their fear is unrealistic, make efforts at not transmitting it to their children, encouraging them to make friends with animals known for their gentle temperament and even overcoming their own fear enough to permit their children to enjoy a pet of their own.

CHILDREN should be taught how to approach animals, and how to deal with situations that may arise concerning them. It is a parent's responsibility to instruct a small child how to act or react to meetings with strange dogs. Very small children, in an effusion of love, may startle or hurt an unsuspecting dog. They must be taught to approach or be approached calmly rather than flinging themselves on the dog. It's a good idea to tell children that they shouldn't make overtures to unaccompanied loose dogs without giving them any reason to fear such animals.

If a child or adult is approached by a strange dog, the best thing to do is stand still. The worst thing you can do is turn tail and run, since even friendly dogs with no evil intentions are likely to pursue a running object. This can lead to panic, as children may fancy they are being chased in order that the dog may bite them.

Stand still, then, with your hands at your sides. Let the dog come as close as he wants, perhaps sniffing at your clothes or shoes. Do not attempt to pat him, although it can't hurt to speak softly, reassuring the dog with "there's a nice fellow" or the like.

If the dog finishes his investigation and makes to move on, don't try to detain him. People are frequently bitten because they attempt to grab a strange dog by the collar and he, resenting this restraint, may turn and automatically slash at your hand.

Dogs respond to low, calm voices. Childish screeches excite them, and children should be cautioned to try not to scream if startled by a strange dog. Usually the dog is attracted by some scent, and once he's investigated, will let you pass on unmolested.

Children on bikes are unfortunately the frequent target of loose dogs. Many dogs, especially those with herding dog blood like Collies or Shepherds, will chase anything that moves unless properly restrained or trained. Car-chasing dogs frequently chase bikes as well, and they present a very real danger to cyclists.

Usually, a bike-chasing dog is only interested in the "sport" of chasing. He has no mean intentions. The best thing for a child to do, when chased by dogs, is to stop and dismount from the bike, preferably on the side away from the dog. We realize that's a lot to ask of a possibly frightened child, but it's the best recourse.

The chasing dog (or dogs) may sniff around for a few moments, but they usually lose interest rapidly. Most are actually friendly to the rider. Once the dog wanders off, walk the bike a safe distance—hopefully out of the dog's vision—and pedal off.

Trying to out-ride or outrun a dog is futile. All you do is feed his excitement and possibly bring him to the point of snapping at you when he overtakes you—which he absolutely will. We have clocked car-chasing dogs at well over 30 miles per hour for short distances (they can't hold that speed for long) and we know no adults or children who can match that.

THE MOST IMPORTANT thing to remember in dealing with strange dogs is that most of them are peaceful, with no thoughts of biting or attacking humans. Nevertheless, there are a number of dogs who will protect themselves when threatened. Running out after a dog with a broom or stick may shoo off the average dog, but you never know when you're up against the exception who will face you to defend himself.

Similarly, kicking at a dog who approaches you may give him the idea that he has something to fear from you, and he may retaliate. Running from a dog communicates your fear to the dog, and this, in turn, may evoke a bullying or pursuing instinct.

If you can get your children to understand these facts about strange dogs, they should be able to cope with any chance encounters without fear and without the lasting trauma that a dog bite or dog-caused accident may create.

ENAMELIST Ruth Buol of Carmel Meadows and artist-architect Hamilton Brown of Carmel were among the local people at the Art Association preview.

JOSEPH BURGESS, one of the three artists featured in the Carmel Art Association's 'Avant-Garde' exhibit currently on display, is seen next to one of his assemblages at the Oct. 5 preview party.

Three Carmel Valley artists on TV tomorrow night

Three of Carmel Valley's leading artists will participate in a television show entitled "Avant-Garde Three" on Friday, Oct. 20 at 7:30 p.m.

Eve Tartar, Molla Archer Moss and Joseph Burgess Jr. will discuss their own work and contemporary art movements in the program prepared by the Carmel Art Association for the "Gallery 13" show on MPTV.

Carmel Art Association President Irene Lagorio, hostess for the series, will open the show with a brief review of the significance of avant-garde movements in art. Miss Sophie Harpe, Association board member, will follow with an interview of the above-named artists and a discussion of contemporary trends in their creative endeavors.

Originally from New York, Eve Tartar-Brown moved to Carmel Valley 11 years ago to pursue the development of the symbolic and architectural wood and paper constructions for which she is noted.

Also a native New Yorker, Molla Moss established a notable reputation in the East with her mystical collages of translucent, stained and folded materials before her move to Carmel Valley in 1970.

Burgess, known for his non-objective constructions of surreal connotation, received his training at Yale and Cranbrook. Burgess was director of the Flint Art Center in Michigan before settling in Carmel Valley.

These special programs, which originated with James E. Chubb of MPTV-13, are being presented as an educational and community service by co-producers Dick Sweetapple, MPTV-13 production manager, and the Art Association.

The third program of the series, scheduled for Nov. 3 at 7:30 p.m., will feature Peninsula artists Jeanne Bellmer, Nancy Johnson and Leon Amyx, as well as Association curators John Halloran and Betty Szold, in a telecast on "Special Art Services."

Open space candidates speak to conservation groups

Sean Flavin, Alice Cantu and Dr. John Lord, candidates for the proposed Park and Open Space District, and Earl Moser, chairman of the Committee for Open Space, addressed the Oct. 13 joint meeting of Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society and Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club at Monterey Peninsula College.

In a program moderated by Jean Bleik, they told the audience of the two years' planning and work that went into Measure A on the Nov. 7 ballot, which establishes a regional park and open space district, and why they considered the measure vital to the future of the area.

Flavin, a Monterey attorney, said that the district was set up under provisions of a state law that has been on the books since the Thirties, a law that was chosen because it provided for the acquisition of open space lands as well as recreational lands. The law, he said, allowed a maximum taxation rate of 10 cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

Flavin said that this would provide an operating budget from taxation of $300,000 a year under present conditions, a budget that might be increased three or fourfold by federal and state aid and private donations.

Dr. Lord, candidate from Ward 4, which includes Pacific Grove and part of Pebble Beach, stressed the importance of the area's natural beauty to one of its main industries, tourism. In discussing imminent threats to the area, he quoted from the Area Plan:

"Almost all the natural beauty we see here is private land, waiting to be developed."

Mrs. Cantu, candidate from Ward 2, Seaside, and a member of the Seaside Planning Commission and the Area Planning Commission, stressed that the measure provided for "acquisition with compensation," an alternative to confiscatory zoning.

Moser, who indicated with examples of cities around the world the advantages of planning for open space before rapid population growth, stressed that while Proposition 20, another important conservation measure, is a state-wide issue, Measure A will stand or fall on the basis of local voting. He called for support, financial and personal, from the local community.

In response to a question from the audience, Flavin and Moser emphasized that although large sections of Monterey County were reserved as permanent open space by inclusion in the Ventana Wilderness Area, there is a great need for open space within the urban centers, space that is easily accessible to the people who live here and to those who will come to the Monterey Peninsula.

The local Audubon Society and Sierra Club chapters have endorsed Measure A.

SOPHIE HARPE, moderator of the Carmel Art Association program, 'Avant-Garde Three,' which is being presented tomorrow (Friday) night at 7:30 on MPTV-Cable 13's 'Gallery 13' show.

Burgess' work in international exhibit

THE WEAVINGS of Carmel Valley artist Anna Kang Burgess have been selected to tour in Europe with the Johnson Wax collection craft exhibit called "Objects U.S.A."

This exhibit recently completed a tour of the U.S. and only certain of the works were selected to form the exhibition which will tour Europe until February of 1974.

Mrs. Burgess, a native of Oahu, Hawaii, has a B.A. from the University of Hawaii and an M.F.A. from the Cranbrook Academy of Art where she also was an instructor in weaving.

Among her professional activities, she was head designer for the late Dorothy Liebes in New York and head of the Fabric Design and Weaving Department at the Cleveland Institute of Art.

Since 1966, she has done free lance designing, wholesale and retail weaving and designing in Carmel Valley and Carmel.

Frykman tells Co-op Nursery parents: 7 to 11 are key years for child

By SALAMAH NEWELL

WHAT'S JOHN FRYKMAN doing lately? Well, Tuesday night he was at Carmel Valley's Parent Co-op Nursery School, talking to parents of the 26 preschoolers who attend the school. The subject was "What to do now so our kids won't get in trouble later."

John Frykman is pretty well versed in the subject of "dealing with kids," for up to October 3rd, he was responsible for the Carmel School District's drug education program. During his two years in the position, he counseled students and parents, did staff training on all aspects of drug problems, and taught an elective course at Middle School on drugs. Previous to coming to the district, Frykman was director of the Drug Treatment Center of the Haight-Ashbury Medical Clinic in San Francisco for two years. A former Army chaplain specializing in clinical counseling and group therapy, Frykman has also served as pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church in Oakland.

Reminding the parents that "good kids are the ones who don't get caught," Frykman said that the age to watch out for is seven to 11, not the teen years. That's the time when the kids are spreading their wings, trying to assert themselves. If you block all avenues of rebellion, allowing them no way to be independent, you'll have trouble later. For instance, you can tell your child how you feel about his behavior or dress ("that long hair looks weird to me") but if you don't order him to cut it, he can respect your views and assert his own at the same time.

One basic technique for successful communication, according to Frykman, is not to challenge the other person's position, because then he will defend himself, and be locked into a position he might want to let go of.

Another point Frykman stressed was avoiding the word "why" as in "why don't you ever come in to dinner on time?" This has two negative effects. First, it implies that your affection is very conditional, and you're not satisfied with the sort of person he is. That's going to make the child (or grown-up) feel insecure. The second effect is to make him defensive. If you say "why?" he'll have to say "because..." and make up some sort of reason and stick to it.

Frykman advised the parents to express how the behavior affects them, how it makes them feel. "I like the whole family to eat together, and it makes me feel sad when you aren't here on time." Now you've got room for a dialogue, instead of a fight.

"WHAT ABOUT DRUGS?" asked a concerned parent. "What will the situation be like ten years from now?" Frykman's answer was surprising. "We live in a completely drug-oriented society. This cup of coffee I have in my hand is a very powerful drug. That cigarette you're smoking is a dangerous drug. Alcohol is a widespread, much-abused drug. I feel the young people today are much more mature about drug use than they were two years ago, and I think this maturity will increase. They aren't really abusing drugs as much as the grownups are. They aren't the ones involved in drunken driving or abusive behavior."

Frykman told the interested parents that ours is the only culture whose standard greeting is "How are you?" Implying, of course, that you're probably not too well. Frykman has abandoned use of the title "counselor or therapist" in his work for the same reason. It implies that his client is "sick." He stressed the fact that "most kids don't have 'problems'—the problem is how the parent reacts to the kid's behavior."

Frykman is presently involved in working part-time with the Institute for Social Concerns, an independent non-profit corporation located at the Mills College campus in Oakland.

One of the projects he is working on there is a program funded by the U.S. Office of Education, which issues mini-grants to communities wanting to work on the drug abuse problem. The community chooses a team of six persons, and one of the Institute staff meets with them in their community and surveys their problems and resources. Then the team comes to Oakland for a two-week intensive training session. According to Frykman, "one of the most important parts of this session is the plan which the local team develops to implement in their own community. After the local plan for dealing with the drug problem is set up, the community receives up to four visits from the Institute staff, to help in further implementation of their program."

Frykman plans to continue living in Carmel, because "I like it here." He's working on two books, A Helpful Home Hip Handbook for Helping Hassling Parents and Other Problems, a handbook for teens with troubles, and Making the Impossible Difficult, a handbook of 'Brief Therapy.'

Assemblyman speaks at CVPOA meeting . . .

Wood explains his support of Proposition 20

By PAT GRIFFITH

"THE PURPOSE OF the Coastline Initiative is not that we are going to add more and more government land along the coastline," Assemblyman Bob Wood told a general membership meeting of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association Tuesday night.

"The intent is simply to make sure that what is built along the coast fits into the environment and aesthetics of the area."

Speaking to a rather underwhelming crowd of 20, Wood analyzed the details of Proposition 20 and refuted arguments raised by its opponents.

Wood said that two features of the coastline bill which failed to pass in Sacramento have been dropped from the initiative measure on the ballot.

The legislative version said that members of the six regional commissions overseeing coastline development would be 51 percent elected, and 49 percent appointed. In the initiative, the split is 50-50.

"As an old county supervisor who believes in the election process, I felt that maybe this 51 percent would have been better," Wood said.

The second provision dropped by the initiative specified that individual counties would not have to bear the loss in taxes resulting from a drop in the value of coastline property, but that this would be shared by residents throughout the state.

Wood said he felt this was only fair because of the thousands of residents inland areas who drive to the coast on weekends to enjoy beaches and cooler temperatures.

Despite these changes, Wood said he considers the initiative a sound one, and expressed surprise at the amount of money being put up to defeat it and "the kinds of fears which have been expressed."

He denied charges that the passage of Proposition 20 would result in a five-year moratorium on all building permits along the coast. As soon as regional commissions are set up, no later than mid-1973, they would be able to issue building permits for projects which do not have an adverse environmental affect or conflict with the coastline plan for the area.

The permit area under their control would only extend back 1000 yards from mean high tide, Wood said.

THIS IS DIFFERENT from the "planning area" for which the regional commissions would develop broad guidelines for future development. The planning area extends inland to the top of the nearest mountain ridge or for five miles, whichever is closer. But building permits for construction more than 1000 yards from the tide line would not go to the regional commission for approval.

Furthermore, Wood said, the regional commissions would be able to exclude certain developed areas from consideration if they already have a density of four units or more per acre -- an exemption which would exclude most of the ocean-front property in Pacific Grove, for example.

Also, no permit would be required for individual home repairs costing under $7500, or for normal dredging and maintenance work.

Wood said he thinks that guidelines established by regional commissions would actually be of great assistance to local legislators.

"Regional government is protective government in some cases," he said.

"We have seen the areas south of Los Angeles . . . one dirty mess after the other. I don't doubt but that the city councilmen who allowed the oil refineries and everything else to come in . . . thought they would have more assessed worth, and that this was good.

"I don't doubt that they did what they thought was right. But in some cases they may also have been influenced by political contributions.

Wood said that if he were a coastal city councilman, he would appreciate a guideline that would help him reach a decision on major developments.

WOOD ACKNOWLEDGED that the initiative could affect construction workers, but added this would be "only a very temporary thing, while the coastline is permanent."

He said he had been surprised to learn recently that sand is formed from silt carried downstream by rivers flowing into the ocean, and does not come from tidal action.

"So maybe the sand we see is the last sand we'll ever see," he said. "Everytime I see a load of sand leave the coast I wonder if our children and greatgrandchildren are going to have the sand to enjoy as we do."

Wood dismissed as a "scare tactic" the recent announcement by the California Mortgage Bankers Association that it would put a freeze on all construction loans in the area affected by the initiative.

PROPOSITION 20, the Coastline Initiative, was the topic of conversation when Assemblyman Bob Wood, right, and Bill Brown, president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, talked prior to the CVPOA's general membership meeting Tuesday at Carmel Valley Manor. (photo by George T.C. Smith).

He pointed out that no property would be confiscated in any way, and emphasized again that the initiative does not ban development, but only seeks to make it conform to environmental standards.

During a question and answer period, Wood admitted that he had come under some criticism from fellow Republicans for being one of only eight Republican Assemblymen to co-sponsor the coastal protection bill. In contrast, 43 Democratic Assemblymen endorsed the measure.

"Some groups have told me they were astounded by my support," he smiled, "but I hope that I'm not going to be blackballed."

He said he has no way of knowing whether or not his support for Proposition 20 is costing him campaign contributions.

Asked if he thought the procedures required to get a building permit approved under the Coastline Initiative might not take longer than getting the same permit approved by a local body, he commented:

"I might take longer in some cases. But in the case of the coast, I think maybe it should take longer. Once a piece of sand or an estuary is ruined, that is it."

Azcarate appeals on cement plant

The Board of Supervisors will hold a public hearing at 11 a.m. Nov. 8 to hear an appeal by Y.R. Azcarate, operator of the concrete batch plant in Roach Canyon, immediately east of Del Mesa Carmel.

Azcarate is appealing the decision of Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon denying another two-year extension of his variance to operate the plant in a residential area.

The plant has been operated in the same location since 1956, but has come under increasing attack from nearby residents because it does not comply with the residential zoning of the property.

Residents appeal Riverwood decision to supervisors

A yellow caution light flashed on yesterday for Riverwood, the 89-unit condominium development which last week received an "All Systems Go" sendoff by the Monterey County Planning Commission.

In a letter filed with the Board of Supervisors shortly before noon, several residents of the lower Carmel Valley asked for a hearing to appeal the use permit granted Arbor Development Company. The supervisors will probably set the hearing for sometime in November.

Leading the list of those appealing the decision are Cole Weston and William H. Rich, whose homes are located along the Carmel River immediately upstream of the proposed development.

During two lengthy hearings before the planning commission, Weston strongly protested that the five or six feet of fill used for Riverwood would divert floodwater onto his and Rich's properties. Carl Hooper, the engineer for the development, argued in response that Weston's home would be flooded with or without Riverwood, and that the effect of the new development would be "negligible."

Following is the letter of appeal filed with the supervisors:

Dear Sirs:

The undersigned residents of areas in the neighborhood of the proposed Riverwood development are aggrieved by, and hereby appeal to you from the action of the County Planning Commission on October 11 in granting a new use permit to the "Riverwood" developers which authorizes construction of 89 condominium units on acreage fronting the Carmel River at a density of 6.4 units per acre.

The undersigned wish to point out that the acreage in question lies in the recognized flood plain and that authorizing such a large development so close to the Carmel River constitutes a serious disregard of the safety, comfort and general welfare not only of persons who will be living in the development but also the safety, comfort and general welfare of persons residing in the neighboring area.

(1) The set-back from the river and the proposed filled elevation of the building area are not sufficient to protect the residents from the standard project flood that the County Flood Control Engineer believes should be taken into account in approving riverside development.

(2) The location of the proposed filled area is likely to divert flood waters onto the neighboring home properties of Rich and Weston.

(3) The use of fill at this location disregards the following warning which is contained in the Army Corps of Engineers' Carmel River Flood Plain Information Study, at p. 28: "Fill operations and levee construction in flood plains should be prohibited from constricting or reducing drainage channels and floodways."

(4) The density of the proposed residential use is also inconsistent with the following provisions of the County General Plan:

The Conservation Element: "Flood plains and watershed areas should be protected and wherever feasible used for recreational purposes."

The Open Space Element recommendation—"To define and establish the use of primary flood plain areas as open space."

Public Services and Facilities Element-Carmel Valley Study Area: "It is recommended that the County continue to implement an aggressive program of flood plain use—particularly uses compatible to the well-documented areas of flooding. Residential development within the flood plain should be discouraged."

Carmel Valley Master Plan: "A flood boundary or open space along the Carmel River is shown generally as set forth on the map, indicating the need for protective measures in regulating the use of land subject to inundation. The boundary is shown as based on the 1955 flood plain, and only covers the obvious flood areas. Detailed engineering is needed to prevent human habitation of the affected areas if a flood plain program is to be entirely successful."

In the words of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers 1967

study—"The interest of the County of Monterey is to protect the public health and safety, and to reduce the financial burden imposed on the entire community in the event of a flood disaster in certain areas. This can be done by implementing flood plain zoning regulations to discourage developments that might be damaged by floodflows. Monterey County has no comprehensive flood plain zoning in effect at the present time, and many examples of improvements, the location of which shows impudent disregard of nature's capriciousness, are in evidence."

The undersigned believe that the proposed "Riverwood" development would constitute another example of disregard for the known hazards of the Carmel River, and they request that the Supervisors exercise their power to deny the use permit outright or to substantially reduce the number of residential units allowed under it to a point more compatible with considerations of safety and the general welfare.

If you know about BMW, you either own one or want one.

Because if you know BMW, you know cars. And there is no other car quite like this.

In one handy, trim, beautifully-built family sedan, you also have one of the world's great sports cars.

Which is why the experts, writing in every automotive publication from Car and Driver to Road & Track, call BMW the best sports sedan you can buy.

On the road, you get performance that is nothing less than tremendous. The car is not only fast, but astonishingly nimble. It responds as if it were an extension of your reflexes, and you can drive it brutally hard without straining it in the least.

In fact, it is literally true that a BMW will cruise at more than 100 mph, and do it for hours on end.

Roadholding? Fantastic. Because no car we know of has a better suspension than BMW's.

With all this, you have an entirely practical, dependable sedan. With plenty of room for a family, plenty of luggage space. Economical to run and maintain.

If you already own a BMW, congratulations. We know how much fun you're having. And if you're planning to buy one, congratulations for another reason. You know a lot about cars.

November Weekend tennis selling out

Three-fourths of the box seats for the International Senior Open Tennis Tournament (sponsored by Walston & Co., Inc.) set for Nov. 9-12 at Pebble Beach are sold out, according to Don Hamilton, tournament director.

Tennis stars such as Pancho Segura, Bobby Riggs, Tom Brown, Frankie Parker and Torsten Johansson (World Senior Champion from Sweden) will compete for $5000 of cash prizes.

Local box seat holders include Harold Zellerbach of Carmel; Jean Lapham Thomas of Carmel Valley; and Pebble Beach residents Mrs. Elizabeth Castle, Mr. and Mrs. Robert O. McMahan, Dr. and Mrs. Harry Lusignan, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gawthrop, Dr. and Mrs. Lot D. Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Pollock Jr., and Mrs. Cyril Chappellet.

Other events scheduled as part of the November Weekend are the 9th annual Golden Domino Tournament, a backgammon tournament (lessons are being given Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. at the La Playa for beginners) and the "Saturday Night Happening" -- a dinner-dance at Del Monte Lodge.

Proceeds from the November Weekend will go to the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra. For more information about the Weekend, telephone Mrs. Robert Gay, 372-2223.

THE ORGANIC GARDENER

... in Carmel Valley

By LEE HALL

ORGANIC FARMING II

THERE IS a man, Russell Wolter, in Carmel Valley who is farming organically. His location is not conducive to best growing conditions since his 100 acres are in the fog belt both summer and fall. Even cool weather crops require a certain amount of sunshine. If he can make a living with organic farming, it should be easier in a location with full sun.

His farm is certified organic by the Rodale group. At the present time there is no law that spells out true organic growing as contrasted with conventional. To remain certified, he has to agree not to use chemical fertilizer or insecticides. The certification group drops in on him periodically, without advance notice, and tests his soil for chemical fertilizer and tests his plants for insecticides. Any trace of either and he loses his certification as an organic grower.

For fertilizer he uses chicken manure, residual compost, ground phosphate rock and ground limestone. He uses no insecticide, although those insecticides made from plants, such as pyrethrins, should not disqualify him.

His faith in the organic method has to be greater than that of the home gardener because if the home gardener should be wrong, he might lose a plant or two to insects, but if the organic farmer is wrong and he gets an overwhelming insect attack, he loses his work and money for the year. Incidentally, state food inspectors allow no insect damage in commercial produce.

It is probable that the home gardener misses a lot of insect attacks because the particular type of insect that likes his plant simply does not find it. The organic farmer with 10 or 20 acres of one kind of plant is much more likely to be spotted by the insect scouts.

Mr. Wolter says that he and one other organic farmer are the only ones he knows of in a 100-mile radius. We know that there is a lot of food sold with the organic label that is not truly organically grown. Mr. Wolter says anyone in doubt about the label should ask the retailer where the produce was bought. If the retailer won't answer or says he doesn't know, the produce is probably bogus. We told him about the roadside business that has "Organically Grown" in big letters. We know for a fact that this retailer buys cull tomatoes from commercial growers who use chemical fertilizers and insecticides. The retailer charges premium prices for them. When the customer complains about the poor quality of the cull tomatoes, this retailer tells them the reason is because no insecticides were used, and that the customer must expect poorer quality in organically grown produce.

Several Congressmen have introduced bills to regulate advertising plants as organically grown, but as of now, there is no law to protect the consumer from unscrupulous retailers.

We talked to Mr. Wolter about the possibility of expanding organic farming; he agreed that it was possible, but until the average person brings pressure on legislators and city councils, that sufficient thought and money would not be provided. He said he has friends who farm who have tried to go organic but had no luck in working out ways to obtain organic wastes necessary. What the city fathers are doing now is to dump into rivers or bays or fill in holes in the ground. The fact that the water and earth disposal systems can no longer handle the problem doesn't matter. The fact that vital organic assets are being wasted doesn't matter.

'The Magic Carpet' to be right at home at White Oaks

The Legend of Sleepy Hollow, Washington Irving's American classic, will highlight the season's opening performance by Hidden Valley's "Magic Carpet Theatre," Sunday, Oct. 29 at the White Oaks Theatre in Carmel Valley. Also on the program are tales from Africa, Germany, the Pueblo Indians and a tale of two from Aesop.

The show starts at 2:30 sharp at Hidden Valley's new home. The theatre, located on Carmel Valley Rd. at Ford Rd. in Carmel Valley, is an exciting place in which to perform as well as watch.

The seats are arranged in a horseshoe shape and there is no orchestra pit to separate the cast and the audience. With its wide open improvisational style, "The Magic Carpet" feels right at home at White Oaks, director Jim Mairs says.

MPC offers history, psychology

courses in Carmel Valley

Monterey Peninsula College began regular credit classes in American History and Psychology of Human Behavior Monday at the White Oaks Theatre in Carmel Valley.

The courses will be condensed from the normal 16-week duration into eight weeks. They will be regular college transfer courses which also apply for the associate degree conferred by MPC.

Holding the classes in Carmel Valley is one way of bringing the college closer to the residents of the district, according to Dr. John Blakemore, dean of instruction at MPC. The college currently offers 15 eight-week credit courses at Fort Ord, and MPC is considering establishing other classes in Marina for residents in that part of the district.

Studies have shown that students attend college in proportion to their proximity to the school, according to Dr. Blakemore. Using this theory, the college recently surveyed residents of Carmel Valley and Marina to see if they would be interested in attending college-sponsored classes closer to their homes.

The classes at the White Oaks Theatre will meet twice each week for three hours a day. The history class will be held Monday and Wednesday from 1-4 p.m., and the psychology class will be offered Tuesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. to noon. Classes will end the week of Dec. 7.

Audience participation and close personal contact, two key elements of the Magic Carpet's performances last year, will be accentuated by the horseshoe stage where the cast and audience can literally touch. The performances will be similar to the Magic Carpet's School Touring program where the "stage" may be no more than a rug in a classroom, and the magic is all in the actors.

Most of the talented, and highly individual cast is back again this year. Flying again with the Magic Carpet are Debbie Berry, known for her "Horse" in "How the Camel Got His Hump"; John Bristol, the Emperor; Steve Fry, the Narrator; June Fry, Cinderella's Fairy Godmother; Carlo Grossman, the camel; Lance Jacobson, the light man; Steve Keener, the one-eyed robber in the "Bremontown Musicians"; John Rousseau, the lion; and Wynn White, who played Cinderella. Joining the Magic Carpet is Jack Whittaker who will start off the year as Ichabod Crane.

Sleepy Hollow, a peaceful little village near Hudson Bay, is the setting for the famous Halloween story. Our own Carmel Valley bears a striking resemblance to the spot described by Washington Irving as the haunt of the Headless Horseman.

As Carmel Valley has some ghosts of its own, the Headless Horseman is perhaps visiting "relatives" this year. "The Magic Carpet hopes that you and your family will enjoy the autumn season and take a Sunday afternoon drive through 'Sleepy Hollow' and visit our new home at the White Oaks Theatre," Mairs said.

The Halloween fun starts at 2:30 sharp. Tickets may be purchased at the door. Adults $1.25, kids 75c. For more information, call 624-6911.

'An Evening of the Macabre' at MPC Friday night

"An Evening of the Macabre" will open "The Great Directors' Series" at Monterey Peninsula College tomorrow (Friday). James Whale's 1935 classic The Bride of Frankenstein and Carl Dreyer's Vampyr will be screened once at 8 p.m. in MPC's Lecture Forum 103.

A collection of scenes and excerpts from other famous horror classics, The Little Rascals in Sprucin' Up and a Betty Boop cartoon will complete the program which is the first of nine in the series being presented this winter by the MPC Film Appreciation Club.

The Bride of Frankenstein is the exceptional sequel to Frankenstein in which director Whale accomplished the almost impossible by improving on his original masterpiece. The film features Boris Karloff and Elsa Lanchester.

Dreyer's Vampyr (Castle of Doom) was made in Germany in 1930 and is one of the few serious and really brilliant creations of the macabre. Dreyer firmly believed that horror is best suggested, not shown -- and that real horror must rely on the imagination of the viewer. This outstanding classic has subtitles and some English dialog and will be shown at 10 p.m., after the main feature and shorts. A $1 admission will be asked at the door.

Other programs in the "Great Directors' Series" are: The Marx Brother's Monkey Business, Nov. 3; Buster Keaton's College, Nov. 17; John Ford's Tobacco Road, Dec. 1; Cecil B. DeMille's King of Kings, Dec. 8; Humphrey Bogart in Howard Hawk's The Big Sleep, Jan. 5; D.W. Griffith's Intolerance, Jan. 19; Frank Capra's Mr. Smith Goes To Washington, Feb. 9 and Greta Garbo in Queen Christina and Marlene Dietrich in Josef von Sternberg's The Devil is a Woman billed together in the concluding program Feb. 23.

Further information about Friday's program of the entire series can be obtained by calling the student activities desk at the college.

THE WINE LIST AT THE CARRIAGE HOUSE lists many fine wines to perfectly complement their American and European dinners. Try their Louis Jadot vintage Pernand Vergeles or their vintage Chateau Mouton Baron Phillippe. Other favorites include a Vintage Schloss Johannisberg Rosalack Spatlese and a J. Drouhin vintage white Burgundy, Puligny Montrachet.

Food at the Carriage House is superb. Among the daily featured entrees, which include relish tray, soup and salad, are hickory smoked ham with Boston baked beans on Thursday; fillet of sole stuffed with crab, sauce supreme, on Friday; half roasted chicken on Sunday; roasted pork loin with applesauce on Tuesday; and Indian Madras on Wednesday. For dessert, try their delicious Viennese nut cake.

THURSDAY NIGHT IS A BIG NIGHT AT THE HATCH COVER for two very good reasons. First, it's good old days prices on "well" drinks in the lounge and second, that's the night to hear Steamboat, the country folk group. Reduced prices on drinks are from 9 to closing that night. The lounge entertainment lineup at the Hatch Cover is Gail on Friday, Cannery Roll on Saturday, Stan Carey on Tuesday, and Friends on Wednesday.

RANCHO CANADA'S PRIME RIB AND CRAB BUFFET is on for Friday night. If you've missed it before, try it this week... it's a Peninsula favorite. Rancho Canada will be closed for meals on Tuesday next week, but open Monday for breakfast and lunch, due to the three-day holiday.

THE VALLEY'S NEWEST GOURMET RESTAURANT, MAXIM, opened this week for luncheon service and will add dinners on November 7th. Mrs. Lidia Elchenko Liu, owner of Boris and Mary's Restaurant on Balboa Street in San Francisco has opened the restaurant in the former location of the White Oaks Restaurant in Carmel Valley Village and will operate it with her son Boris and daughter, Mary. Mrs. Liu is originally from Siberia... her parents fled to Manchuria during the Russian Revolution.

Lunch at Maxim is served 11 to 3 and features French food with a Russian accent. The menu includes such Continental favorites as cabbage stuffed with beef and rice, chicken Orleans, breast of chicken Maurice, veal cordon bleu, and Coquille St. Jacques a La Parisienne. Their menu also includes borscht and blintzes.

Maxim is being enlarged to include the shop next door which will become an elegant dining room in which the gourmet dinners will be served starting November 7.

THE RAILROAD STATION DECOR OF KING'S CROSS STATION gives it a charm all its own. Owner, David Bindel, patterned his cocktail lounge after London's King's Cross Station. From the baggage cart right inside the door to the model of the former crack British train, Flying Scotsman, behind the bar, the lounge reflects the charm of the original station from which it draws its name... even to the high vaulted ceiling and the baggage in the racks over the pullman-style booths along the wall.

The Flying Scotsman made its last run between King's Cross Station in London and Leeds in 1963 and accounts of its runs and achievements are decouped on the bar at David Bindel's Pacific Grove spot. He even has several of the lights from this famous train. Railroad lantern lights, along with Tiffany shades, furnish most of the lights inside, and candlelight in lanterns light the tables and the booths. There are many English antiques and even the carpet on the floor is from England.

King's Cross Station offers entertainment seven nights a week. Steve Uhler, English folk singer, Monday through Wednesday, Mike and Nan, folk singers, Thursdays and Sundays, and Ron Blair on Friday and Saturday.

Sunset views:

How Sunset Center relates to the community

By FRANK H. RILEY, Director
Community and Cultural Activities

IN THE LAST FEW DAYS I have had occasion to conduct several different people through Sunset Center to show them the facilities and then to try to explain to them what goes on here. This makes me re-examine myself -- our staff -- our programs -- but most of all, our ideas about how we should relate to the community.

Now, all over the country there are magnificent and costly facilities that are known as civic auditoriums, civic centers, convention centers, and other similar buildings and complexes. Each is to some extent unique, but all have certain common qualities.

Because our Sunset Center, which would be included in this group is in a unique community, and because it is in a city smaller than almost any other that has a comparable facility, and also because the attitude of the City Council over the years in regard to what we lump under the term "culture" is so much more understanding and sympathetic than in most cities -- we are able to operate under a completely different philosophy.

To go back -- the usual civic facility is a place designed to attract conventions, conferences, and trade shows and to provide a superior showplace for traveling shows, concerts, and extravaganzas from circuses to ice shows. It must also provide the facilities of a sports arena. In short, they are primarily spaces for rent.

To be sure, the renters are solicited from those who will bring the most people to the city; that is, they cater to those events that will add to the local economy. The basic approach, although oriented to civic betterment, is essentially commercial.

To get back to Carmel -- we have a Center that is steeped in tradition; a facility that lacks some of the plastic features of the great multi-million dollar complexes. But our Center does have the basic comfortable "old shoe" facilities that are ideal to serve the local community.

So in planning activities at Sunset, we try to act accordingly. We house the local "culture" as represented by the Monterey County Symphony, the Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society, the Carmel Music Society, the Bach Festival, and Hidden Valley Music Seminars with its summer concerts, its musical shows, and its children's theatre.

Most of these are not designed to bring large numbers of outsiders to town. They are designed more to entertain and "elevate" local audiences; but in the case of three of the organizations, an even greater community service is inherent in the opportunities they offer to local residents to find an outlet for their own creative growth -- an outlet for the talents which they so develop.

This too, is what we have in mind when we plan the events which Sunset Center itself sponsors. If you examine some community programs, you will find a boast that goes something like this, "In 1964 we started a class in pot holder weaving with ten participants. Each Wednesday the class has met at 2:15 and now there are 137 participants enrolled. This is evidence that we are offering a vitally interesting program and are serving more and more people."

Well, somehow, I can't go along with this kind of thinking. Not that there is anything wrong with pot holders. No -- the trouble is that the program shows no imagination or growth. It assumes that once you start on pot holders you should stick with it -- the more pot holders, the greater your success.

We try to think instead that the obligation of a Center like Sunset is to inject some additional "yeast" into the community culture. It should say, "Look here -- we are offering this new class that no one else in the community is offering. We cannot guarantee that you will like it, but we would urge you to try it -- see if you like it -- if you don't, drop it. If you do, we are pleased to have interested you in it -- go out with our blessing and grow." Having done that, we offer another chance to get acquainted with another skill, ability, or interest. So that over the years, we have hopefully opened many doors to many people.

So, when you see that we are offering guitar lessons or a class in investment techniques or bonsai culture or decoupage or when our studios offer dancing or sculpture or painting and drawing or graphics, or when Community Theatre of Hidden Valley advertise tryouts for a show, don't think "I don't know anything about it so it's not for me." No -- think instead, "Why don't I just give it a whirl and see what it's all about?" Who knows, you might discover something really rewarding; at least it will be a new experience. At least you will have grown a little.

If this helps you think a little differently of your cultural center, so much the better. If it inspires you to ask us for some help or information, you will be welcome.

Guild Shakespeare readings continue

Forest Theater Guild members and interested people in the community will continue to meet on Tuesday evenings at 7 p.m. in the Forest Theater-in-the-Ground at the Forest Theater to read Shakespeare plays.

Richard III has been selected to be read next week, with Charles Thomas as director. These are not casting sessions, but it is hoped that talent will be uncovered, Thomas explained.

The group finished reading Taming of the Shrew last week with Barbara West offering help and suggestions.

The memorial offerings which have totalled nearly $1000 will be spent for Forest Theater lights, it was decided at a recent board meeting. Gunnar Norberg was chosen to replace his late wife, Barbara, as vice-president.

The resignation of Adele Bramlet, costume designer for Twelfth Night was accepted with extreme regret and appreciation for her services.

Minor changes in the by-laws by Philip Oberg, attorney, to bring them in line with state regulations, were approved.

VALLEY LIBRARY

By BETTY SHIELDS

Attention ladies and gentlemen of our community. If you have passed your third birthday and are not yet in kindergarten, you are invited to the library on Wednesday morning, October 25th at 10:30, for an opportunity to learn about spooks and goblins. Mrs. Huntington has been reading up on these subjects and is coming specially to tell you what she has learned. It seems there is an evening set aside for them (the spooks) called Halloween and she wishes you to be well informed!

Does everyone remember that it's 'only on Thursday' that the library opens at 12:00 and is open in the evening from 6:00 - 8:00? Of course we do sneak out for dinner between 5:00 and 6:00. The rest of the week days are as always 9:00 - 12:00 and 1:00 - 5:00.

A thank you to our friends for being so pleasant about hunting up lost books. They do have sneaky ways and are very good at hiding, but with patience, they can be caught. They have two specially good hiding places, under beds and under car seats. Good hunting!

'Jubilee of Jewels' this weekend at Fairgrounds

The Carmel Valley Gem and Mineral Society will hold its 13th annual Jubilee of Jewels Gem Show Saturday and Sunday at the Monterey Fairgrounds in the Exposition Building.

Theme of this year's show is "Superstitions in Stones." Mary Aspaas will play her xylophone of "singing rocks," a unique instrument made of 23 slabs of phonolite she found near her home in Arizona.

Also on the bill are live demonstrations in the arts of lapidary including lost wax casting, faceting and sand casting by club members and guest exhibitors.

Home-cooked foods, pies and sandwiches will be served. Show hours are Saturday, 10 a.m. - 9 p.m.; Sunday, 10 a.m. - 6 p.m.

ALL SEATS RESERVED: Series (8 shows) $19.60. Single program tickets: $3.50 & $3.25 NOW at Julia Marlow Box Office, Sunset Center, Carmel, 624-9446, & Abinate Music Store, 425 Alvarado, Monterey, 372-5893.

Public hearing Tuesday on widening Rio

The Monterey County Road Department will hold a public hearing Tuesday night to discuss improving and widening Rio Road west of Highway 1 and formation of a district to underground utilities along the route.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the library of Carmel Middle School.

Road department officials will outline plans to improve Rio Road within the existing curb lines as far west as Oliver Road and then widen the street to four lanes from that point to the Carmel Mission.

This project is included in the department's five-year plan for the county, and will be funded in the '73-'74 budget.

In connection with the road work, it is proposed to underground utilities in the area, as is gradually being done along lower Carmel Valley Road. Birch Place would also be included in the underground district.

Padres bow 8-6 in heartbreaker — face Gonzales tomorrow

"It was a heartbreaker. We just lost the ball game," was Coach Jason Harbert's reaction to Carmel High's 8-6 loss in the Friday-the-13th game against Marelo Prep in Santa Cruz. The game, a Mission Trail League opener for both teams, left Marelo undefeated and Carmel with a record of three wins, a loss and a tie.

The Padres scored on the opening kickoff and the coach said, "even though we had the upper hand in the second half, we weren't able to score."

Valley fire departments need volunteer firemen

If you ever wanted to be a fireman, now's your chance.

The Carmel Valley Fire Protection District, which serves a five-mile radius around the Village, is looking for more daytime volunteers.

Any man between the ages of 21 and 45 is eligible. He should be working at a job that keeps him in the general Village area during the day.

Anyone interested should contact Fire Chief Chip Collins.

The Valley fire district has hired Wadsworth Grant Kalani Fonseca of Village Drive as the third paid man in the department. He will be on duty at the station every day except Tuesday and Wednesday, assisting Collins and Capt. Don Laird.

Meanwhile, farther west, the brand new County Service Area No. 59 is seeking volunteers to assist with fire protection in the mid-Valley area.

Men will be needed on a stand-by basis for both daytime and nighttime duty to augment the paid crew serving on a contract basis at the State Division of Forestry station on Carmel Hill.

CSA No. 59 hopes to establish a station in the mid-Valley in the near future, and purchase a large engine equipped to fight structural fires.

Potential volunteers should contact CSA No. 59 chairman Bill Brown, 624-8693.

Feedbag...

By LUCY SMITHSON

WHEN A PERSON "works like a horse," he puts in a long, busy day. Horses rarely do that any more. People work or go to school, which is much the same thing. Horses stand around munching the hay and taking life easy. Well, not always, but quite a lot of the time.

While the horse is standing around, he may dream up little amusements to pass the time. Little amusements like cribbing or windsucking, pawing at fences or eating them. These and some other little habits horsemen call "vices."

What can you do about vices?

Fence chewing, for instance, is an awfully expensive habit. There's almost nothing you can do to the horse to stop him from eating wood once he's got the habit. Working the horse eight hours a day or turning him into a 100-acre grassy pasture may help, but it's easier to treat the fence.

Some woods are less tasty than others—cypress, cedar, or oak for instance—but who can afford them? Most barns and corrals are built of pine. Most horses leave painted wood alone. Whitewash isn't yummy either.

Creosote brushed on discourages many horses from eating the treated wood. You have to creosote both sides of the fence boards, not just the horse's side. The creosote apparently draws the moisture from the untreated side and causes the fence to deteriorate more rapidly if you do just one side.

Some people place a row of nails on the top rail to stop the horse from eating it. This doesn't help much and can be dangerous. You can staple chicken wire around the boards, but sharp ends keep working themselves up. Barbed wire is a no-no. Just ask Dr. Petkus or Dr. Morse how many wire cuts they've treated!

Some horses will respect an electric fence installed inside their regular fence. We once tried electric fencing in a five-acre field. The first time the horse touched it he took off running and in less than five seconds ran up a $200 veterinary bill.

Try to avoid redwood fencing. Many horses eat it like candy.

CRIBBING is a queer sort of vice. The horse presses his teeth on any convenient wooden edge and using that leverage, arches his neck and gulps air into his stomach. He gets some strange satisfaction from doing this (an oxygen freak?) and may do it again and again. The trouble is, horses can't belch. They may swallow so much air into their stomachs they get a tummy ache. The name for that is colic and it can be a very serious matter.

Windsucking is a rarer form of cribbing in which the horse doesn't need to brace his teeth on anything. He can just arch his neck in mid-air. Cribbers and windsuckers give a grunting gasp as they suck in the air. You won't mistake it for anything else.

What you do to a cribber or windsucker is to put a wide, stout leather strap around the top of his neck. Then he can't arch his neck at the critical angle. Some cribbing straps come with movable teeth that jab the horse when he tries to crib. These are rarely worth the price difference as a confirmed cribber will crib in these anyhow.

ANOTHER BOREDOM bit is pawing at the ground or at the fence. Some horses dig dirt; others are hung up on the fence.

Having a companion to share his living quarters will help a bored horse. If another horse isn't available, perhaps a chicken or a duck will be accepted. Dogs and cats rarely work out because they want to live in buildings (preferably the house) instead of in the corral. Have you thought about giving your horse a Shetland pony for Christmas?

Gerri Brandly wins gold medal at Walnut Creek

Gold, silver and bronze medals were added to the Cypress Swim Club's treasure chest last weekend by three Carmel Valley swimmers at the Pacific AAU Individual Figures Competition on Sunday at Clarke Memorial Swim Center in Walnut Creek.

Led by Gerri Brandly (daughter of Col. and Mrs. Roland Brandly), who won a gold medal; Kim Neill (daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Neill Jr.), who won a silver medal; and Kathryn Blevens (daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mel Blevens), who won a bronze medal, seven of the nine Cypress entrants placed among the top seven to win awards for the famed synchronized swimming club.

Ms. Brandly won her gold in the 13-14 Intermediate age group, defeating her nearest rival, Susan Boese of the Santa Clara Aquamaids, by almost two points. But Ms. Boese edged Cypress swimmer Kathryn Blevens from second to a third-place bronze medal finish by 6-100th of a point. Debbie Jameson, also of Cypress, took the seventh-place ribbon in this event.

Ms. Neill's victory came in the 11-12 Novice age group. In a field of 61 competitors, Kim beat Leslie Schremp of the Walnut Creek Aquanats by 1½ points to win the silver second-place medal, and was outdistanced the same number of points by Maggie Keep of the Santa Clara Aquamaids, who won the gold in this event.

Other Cypress winners were Julie Lipman, seventh place in the 13-14 Novice age group; and Suzanne Calley, fifth place and Loria Shaw, seventh place, in the 15-17 Novice age group.

Mindy Lipman placed 38th in the 11-12 Novice age group event, and Robin Bliss, in her first AAU competition, placed 53rd in this same age group.

Next competition for the local mermaids will be on Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 28 and 29 when Cypress will hold the 1972 Pacific AAU Class "B" Synchronized Swimming Championships at the Carmel Valley Community Pool, the last AAU meet of the current competitive season. The public is invited to attend, at no charge, the final events beginning at 10 a.m. on Sunday, Oct. 29.
